

PRESS RELEASE

Frankfurt, 08 June 2021

Lufthansa starts vaccination of employees in Germany

- Initially up to 2,000 weekly vaccinations
- Michael Niggemann: "Lufthansa employees make important contribution to society."
- Crews and employees with personal customer contact receive vaccination offer first

Lufthansa today began vaccinating the first employees in Germany. In the first week, 2,000 vaccine doses will be available and can be administered by the Group's Medical Service in Munich, Frankfurt and Hamburg. The initial focus is on those colleagues who have personal contact with customers, such as aircraft crews or employees at the stations.

"Since the beginning of the pandemic, our employees have also been making an important contribution to society. With our flight and cargo services, we give travelers the security of being able to perform socially or economically important tasks, for example. We are pleased to now be able to offer our employees a vaccination," says Dr. Michael Niggemann, Chief Human Resources Officer Lufthansa Group.

Lufthansa recommends that its employees take advantage of the opportunity to be vaccinated.
